Strategic Order Flow Trading

Module 6
Order Flow Strategies & Setups

Disclaimer

This course is for educational and informational purposes only and should not be considered a solicitation to buy or sell a futures contract or make any other type of investment decision. Futures trading contains substantial risk and is not for every investor. An investor could potentially lose all or more than the initial investment. Risk capital is money that can be lost without jeopardizing ones financial security or life style. Only risk capital should be used for trading and only those with sufficient risk capital should consider trading. Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future results.

CFTC Rules 4.41 - Hypothetical or Simulated performance results have certain limitations, unlike an actual performance record, simulated results do not represent actual trading. Also, since the trades have not been executed, the results may have under-or-over compensated for the impact, if any, of certain market factors, such as lack of liquidity. Simulated trading programs in general are also subject to the fact that they are designed with the benefit of hindsight. No representation is being made that any account will or is likely to achieve profit or losses similar to those shown.

I encourage you to explore and develop your own strategies based on your experience, knowledge, and insights gained from footprint charts. As you become more familiar with order flow, traders can uncover new patterns, triggers, and trade setups specific to their trading style.

It is one thing to have an order flow set up appear prior to taking a trade, you also need continuing order flow after taking the trade.

I always watch order flow prior to the setup and after, when the order flow is continuing that’s when I get into the trade. I don’t just jump in because of the order flow setup. I let the market take me in.

1. Initiative imbalances – imbalances out of value.

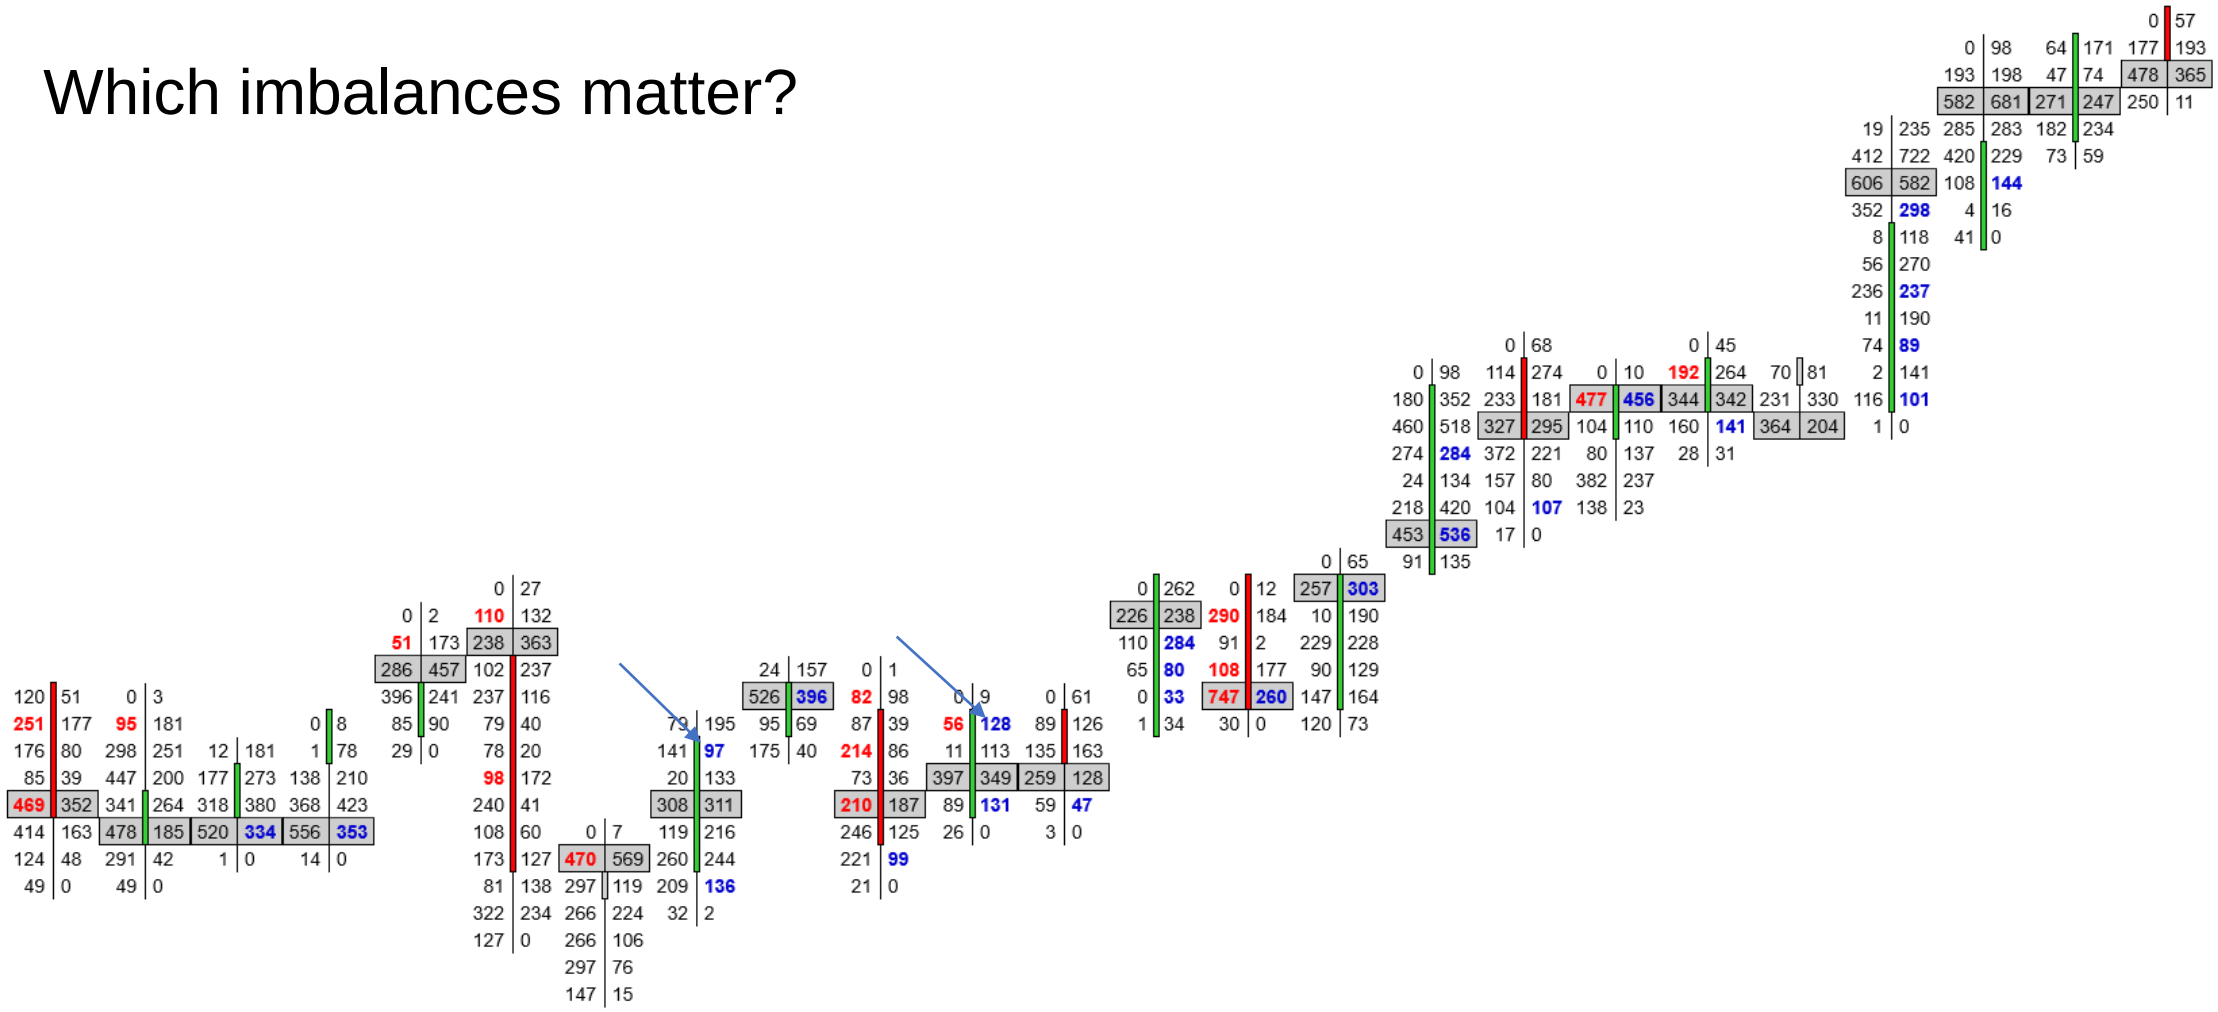

In a green-up candle, look for buying imbalances above the bar's value area high to get long.

In a red-down candle, look for selling imbalances below the bar's value area low to get short.

2. Min/Max Delta Decay

Look at Max and Min delta.

For bearish decay, Max Delta should be getting smaller over several bars, while Min Delta should be growing consistently* over several bars.

For bullish decay, Min Delta should be getting smaller over several bars, while Max Delta should be growing consistently* over several bars.

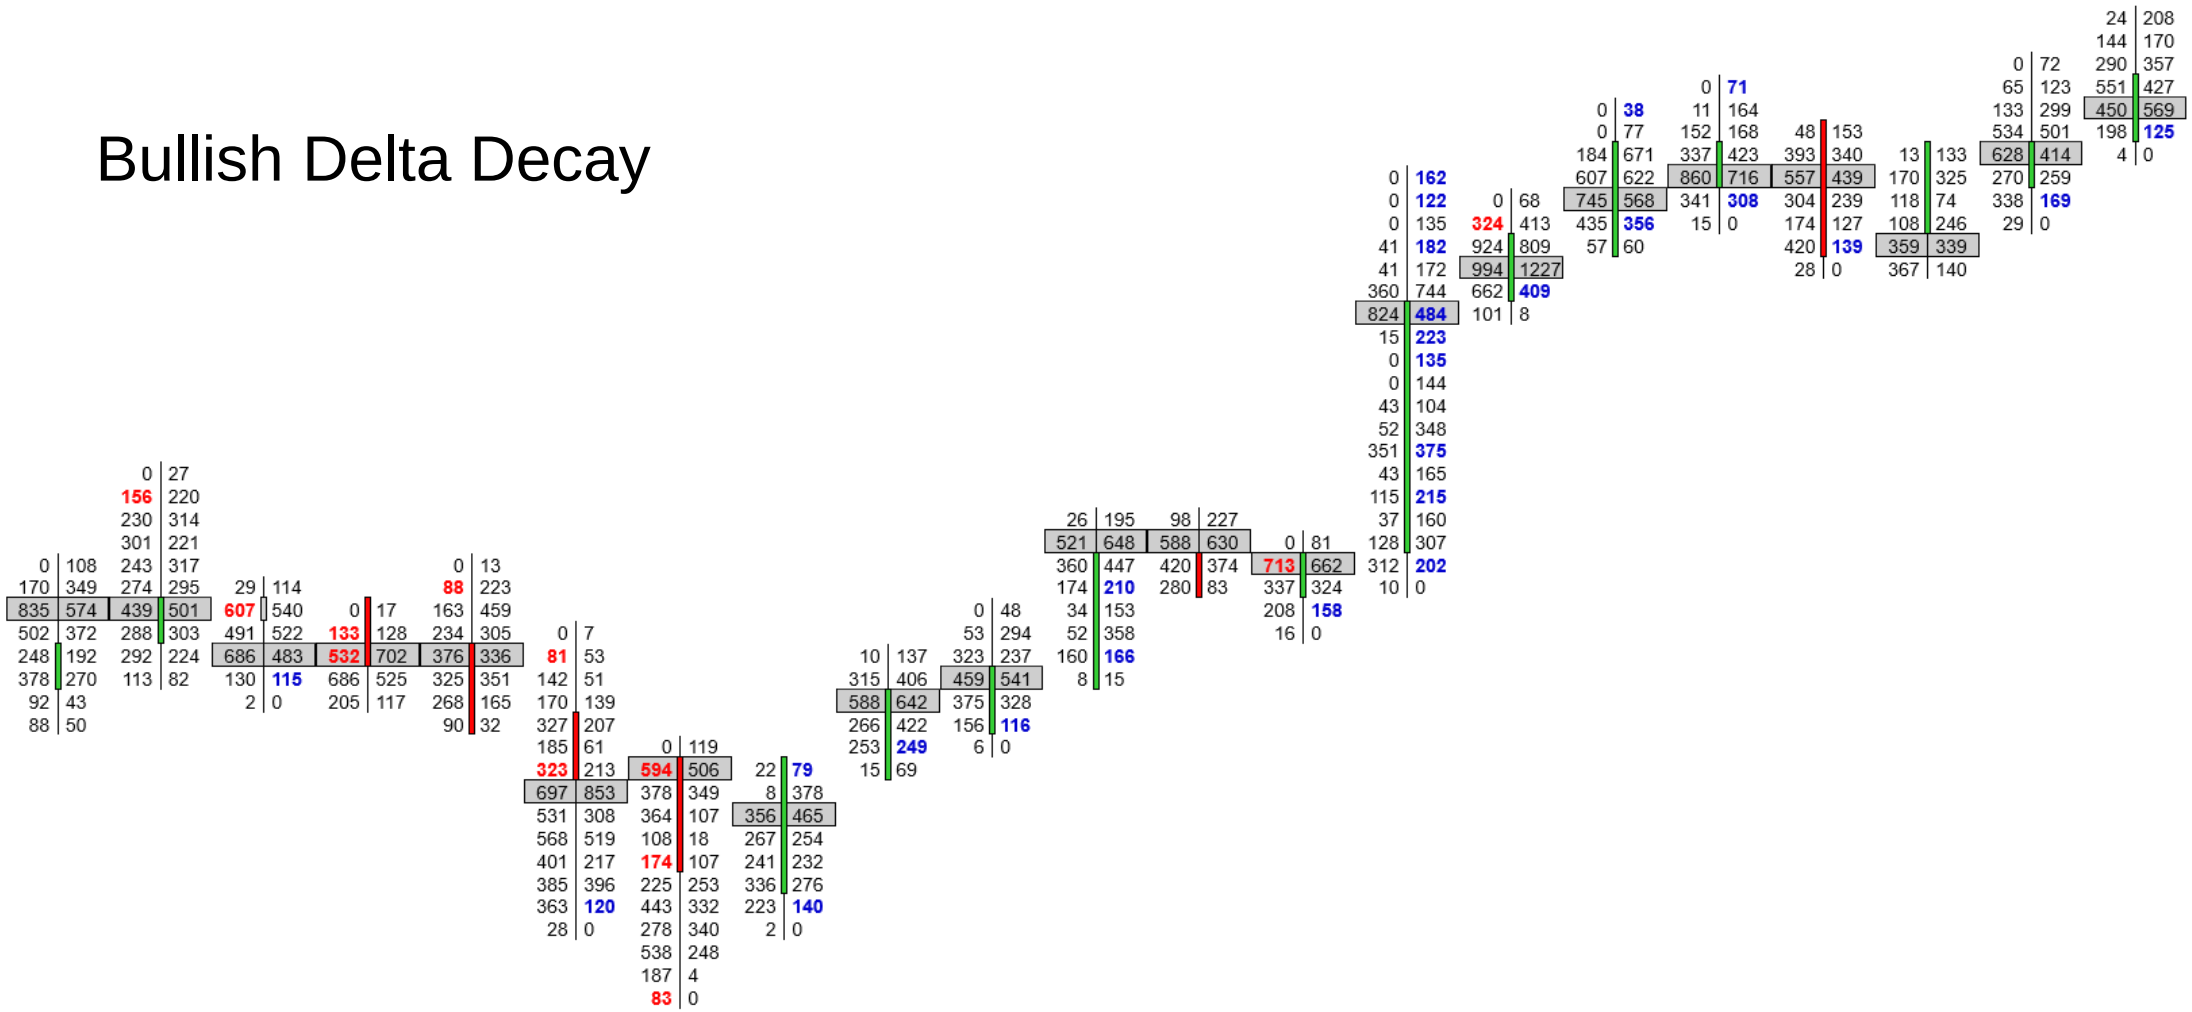

*Growing consistently does not mean sequentially bigger.

Can have overlap between Max/Min Delta.

3. Passive traders in control.

Passive traders are a sign of absorption. The market does a pretty good job of distributing volume in a bar, but there are times when you start seeing the heaviest volume on one side of the bar, it warrants special attention.

In green-up candles, the two highest volume levels are on the bid side of the bar.

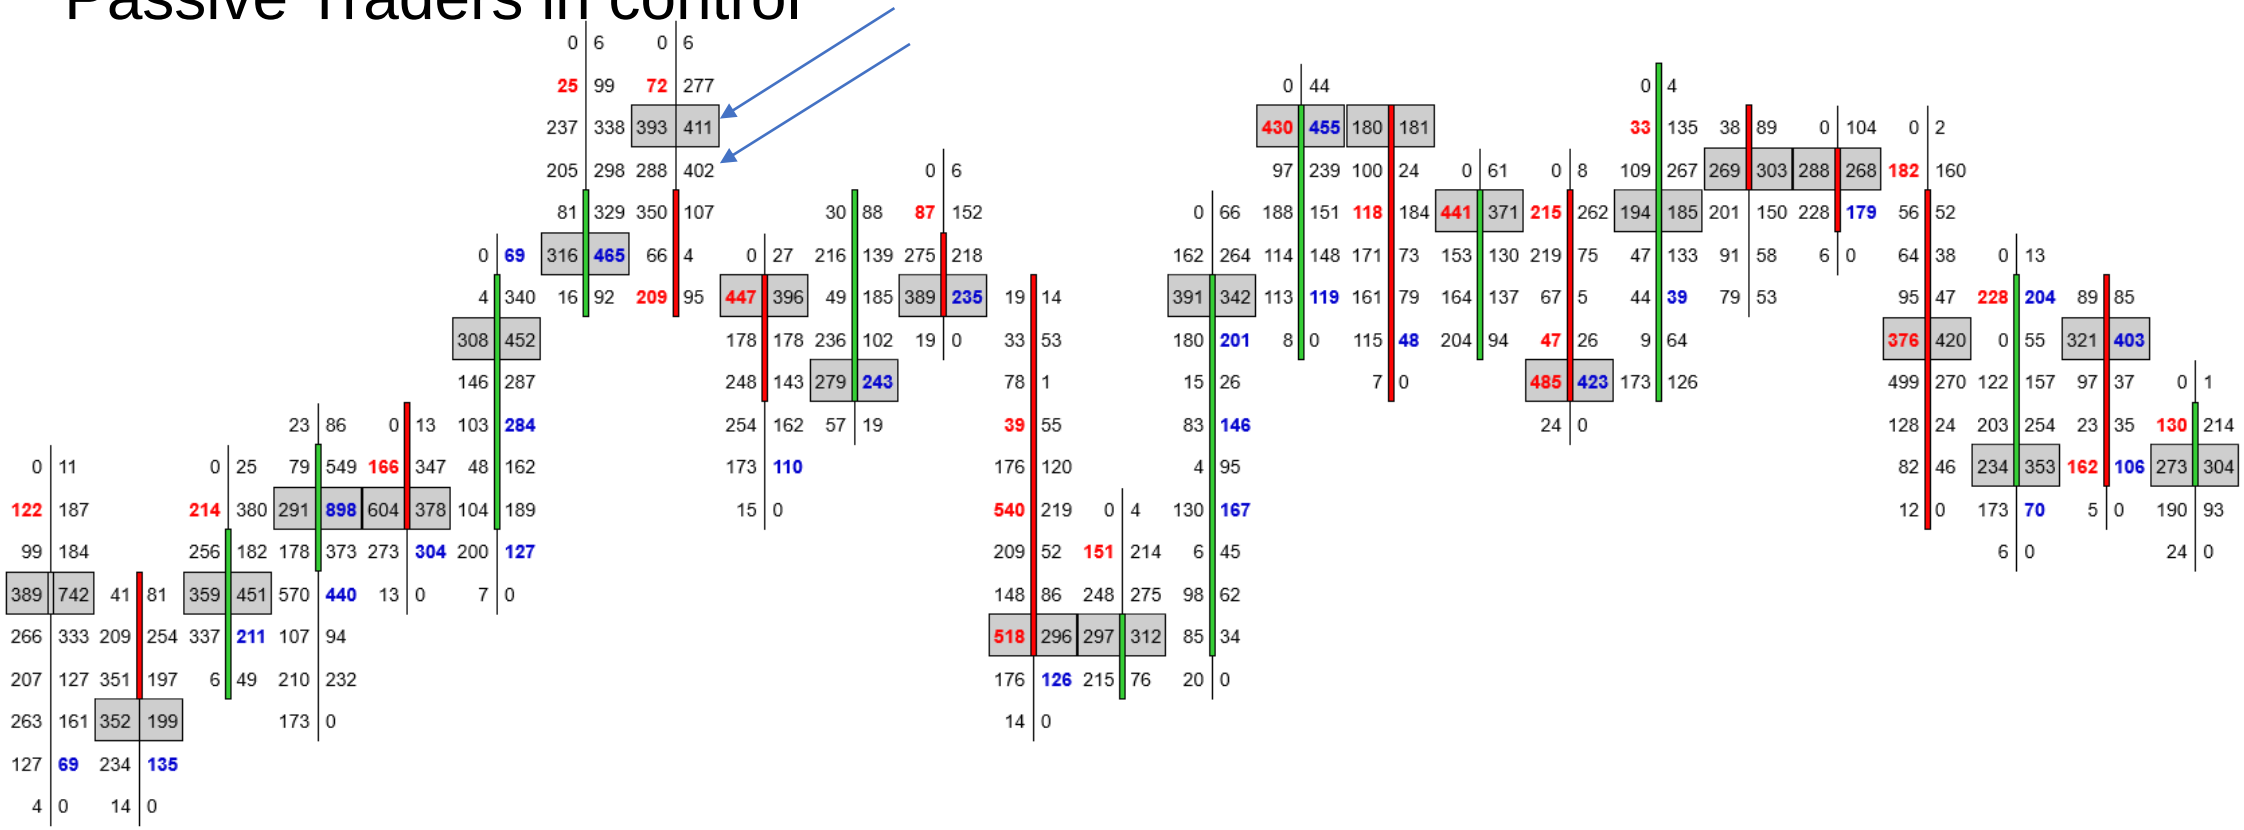

In red-down candles, the two highest volume levels are on the offer side of the bar.

4. Delta Volatility

There are two types: Bullish and Bearish.

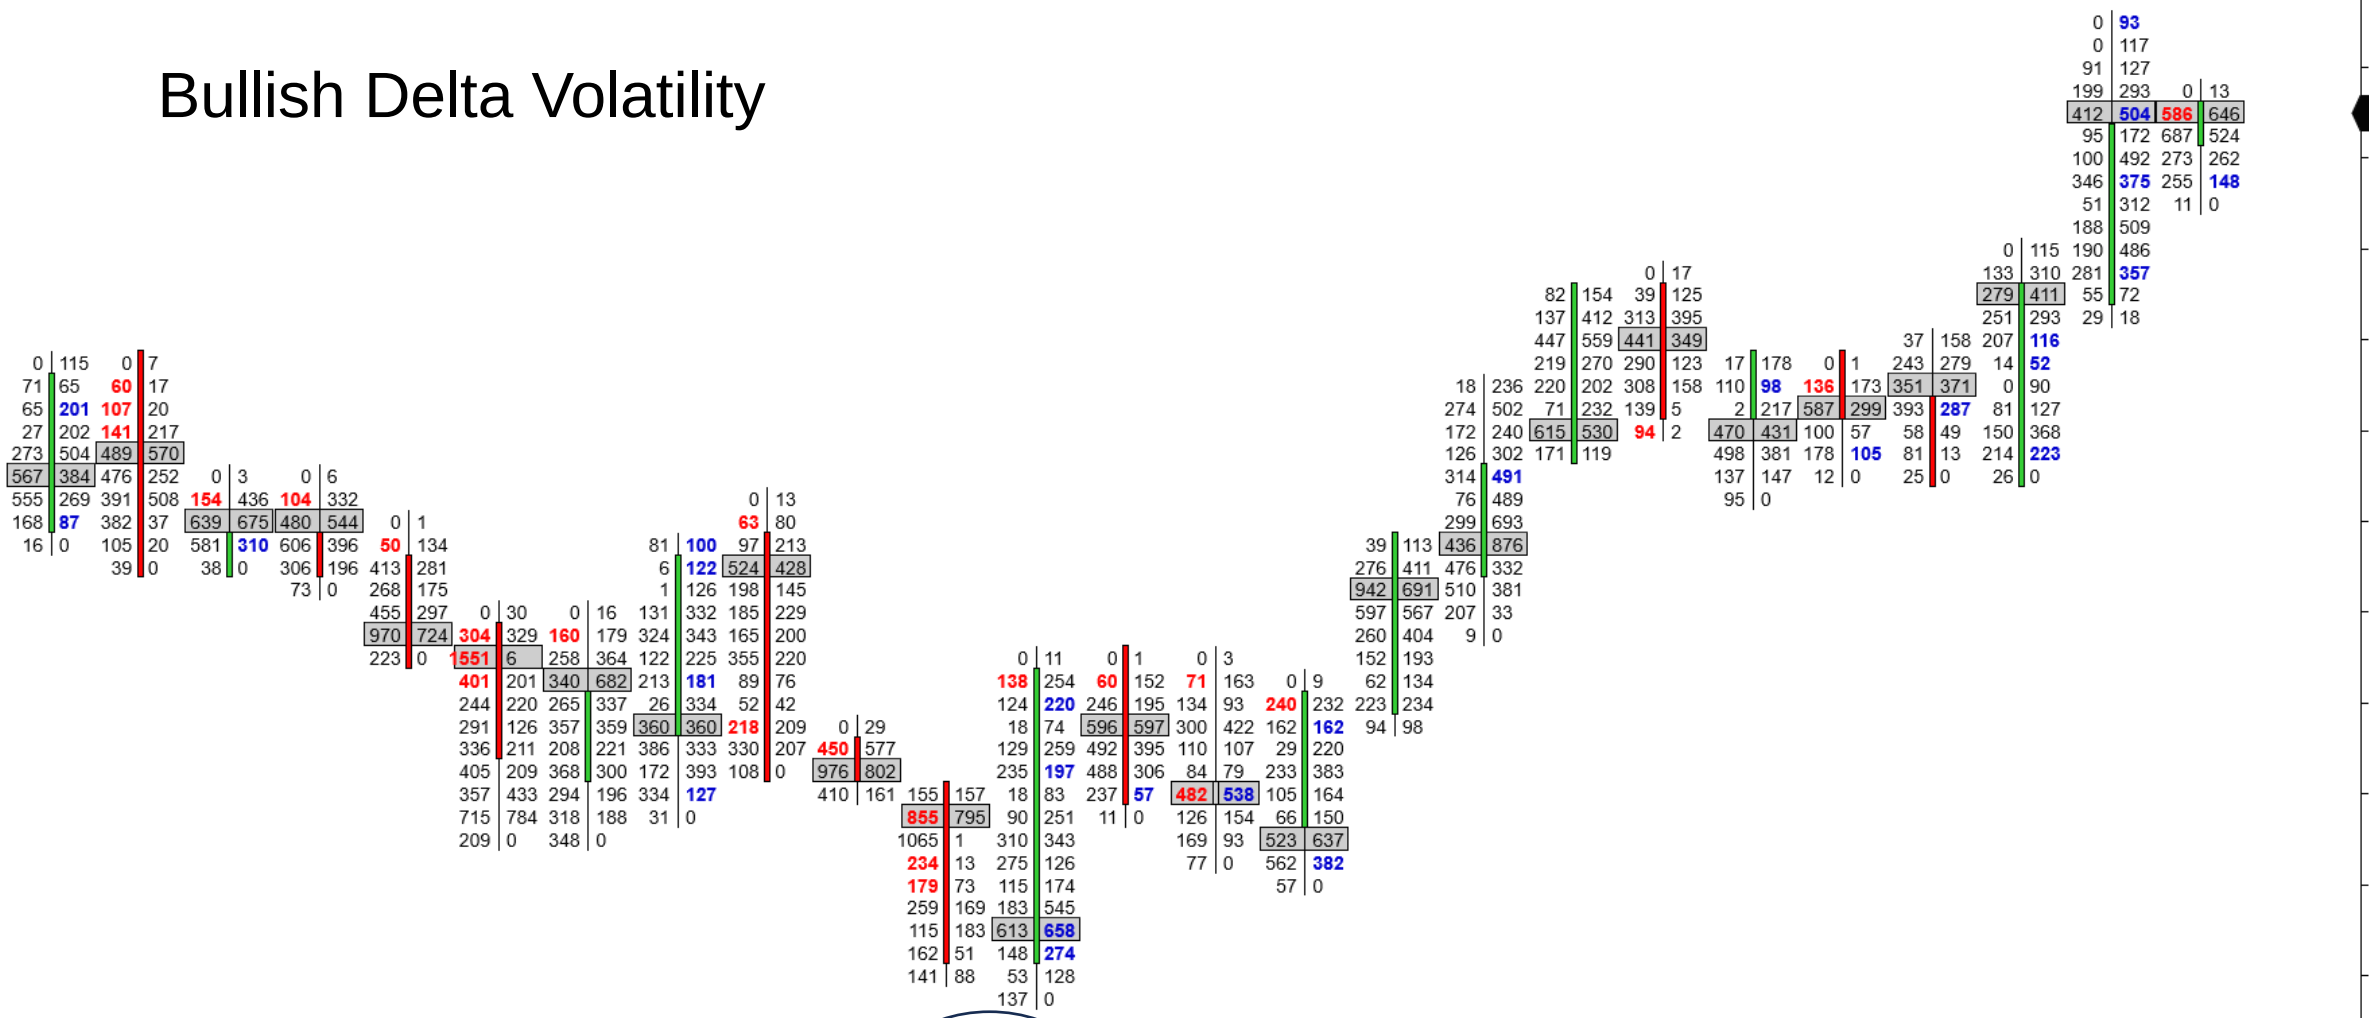

Bearish example: Big positive delta number, near the max delta, and the bar's range is small. The next bar has a big negative delta, near the min delta and the bar's range is obviously bigger than the previous bar.

Bullish example: Big negative delta, near the min delta, and the bar's range is small. The next bar has a big positive delta, near the max delta and the bar's range is obviously bigger than the previous bar.

5. Open POC

Bullish Open POC – Requires 2 consecutive green candles. The 2nd green candle's POC should be above the high of bar 1. Look to get long on the bar after bar 2, when it trades above the high of bar 2.

Bearish Open POC – Requires 2 consecutive red candles. The 2nd red candle's POC should be below the low of bar 1. Look to get short on the bar after bar 2, when it trades below the low of bar 2.

6. Imbalance Reload

When levels of imbalances are reloaded. Imagine a big order coming to the market. It is not going to get filled all at once. It will be spread out over time or volume traded. To see buying imbalances at the same level over several bars shows the reload. Or selling imbalances at the same level over several bars.

7. Passive Whales

Passive traders provide liquidity to the market. Aggressive traders take liquidity out of the market.

There are times when big passive orders absorb the trade. The best way to view find these traders are through a delta footprint (delta at price).

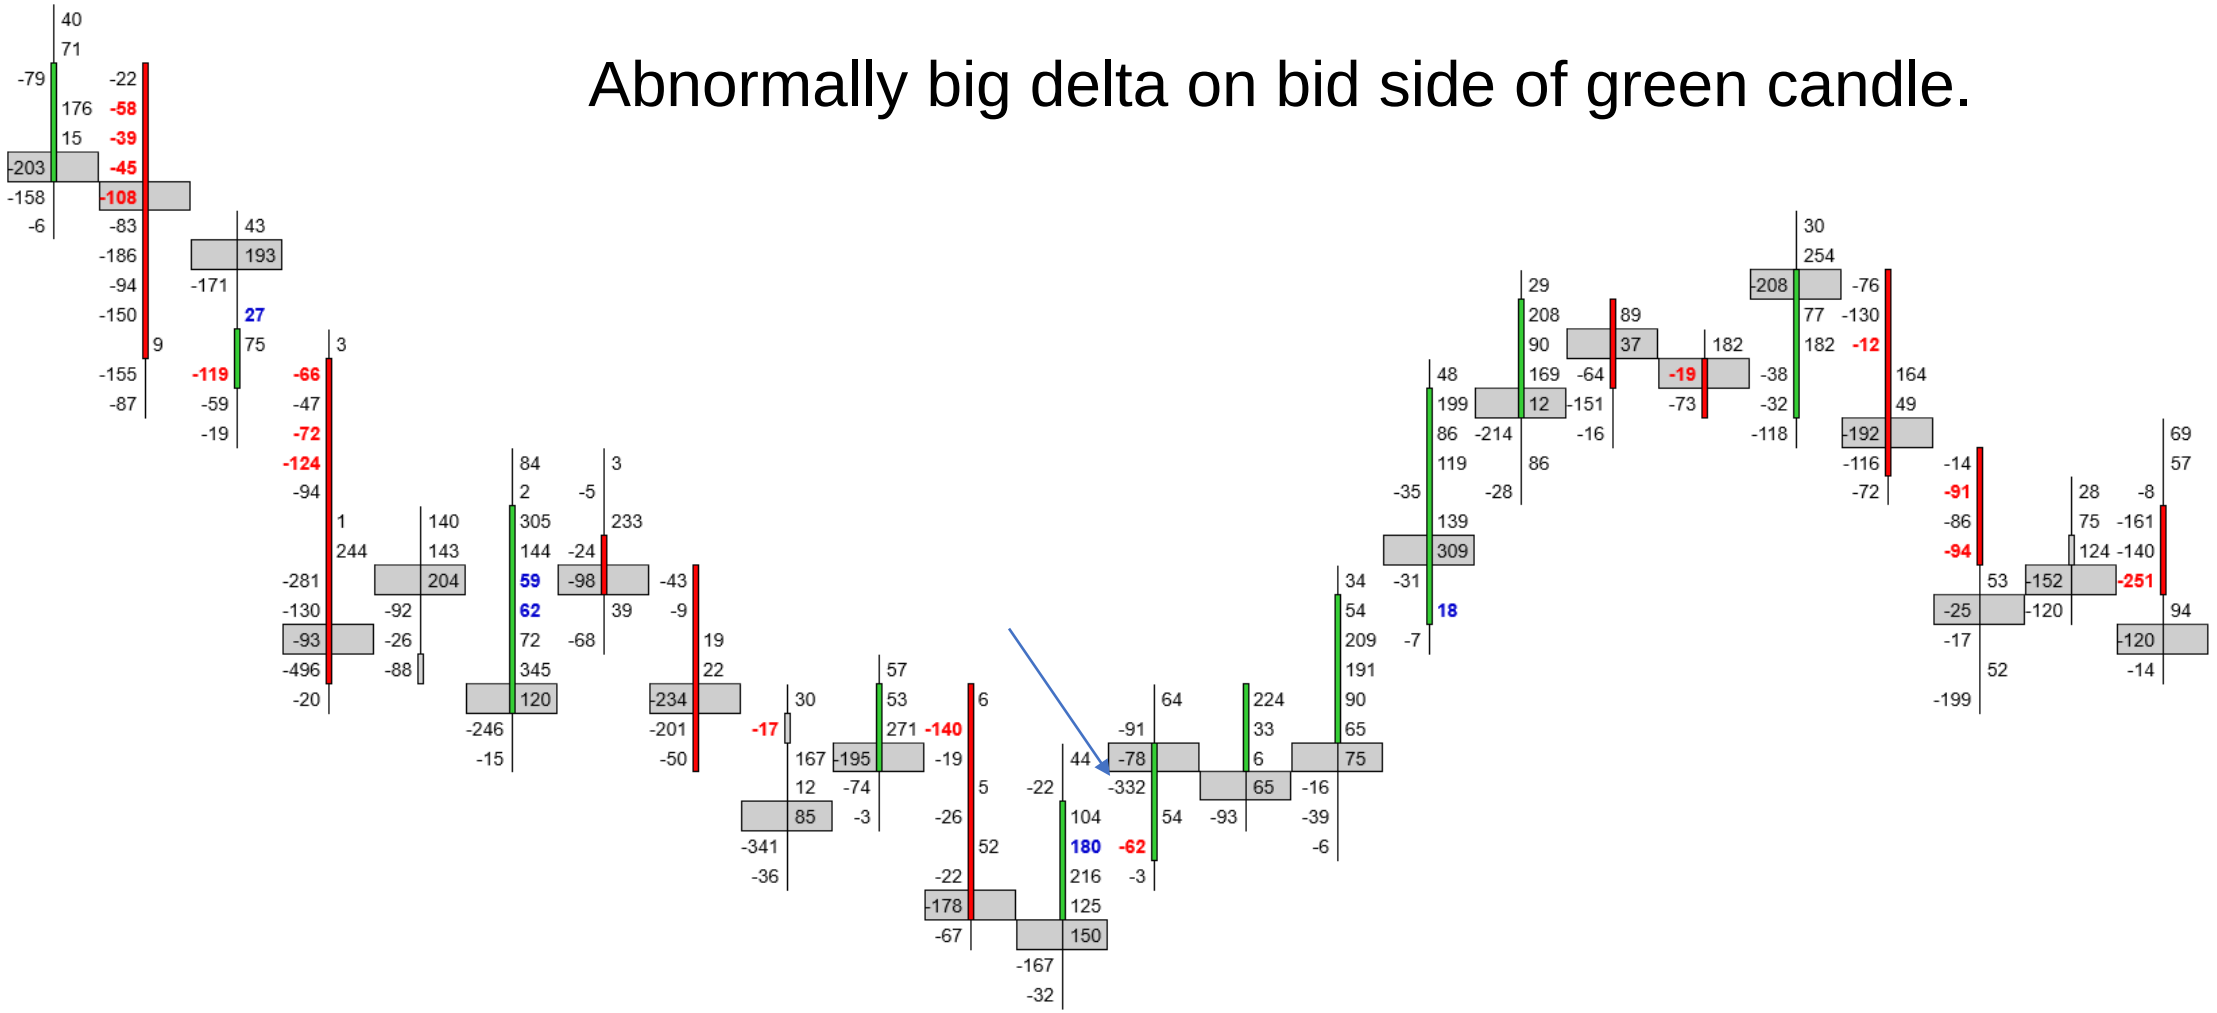

What you are looking for specifically is big delta at price on the bid side of a green candle (absorption support) or big delta at price on the offer side of a red candle (absorption resistance). This is market generated information.

By big, I mean knock you over the head big.

At its core, order flow analysis comes down to reading and interpreting data points - price, volume, delta, sentiment. It may seem complex initially, but the more fluent you become in analyzing the data flow streaming from the markets, the easier reading order flow and understanding market movements becomes. Like learning any new language, order flow starts feeling comfortable and intuitive over time and practice.

When you make sense of this data flow, you grasp what drives prices. The noise fades to the background and your focus zones in on the true signals that pinpoint opportunity. Internalizing this flow of data is the last skill any trader needs.

So take the time to observe the order flow, decode it, and gain fluency. The market will reveal itself to you in new ways and you'll trade on a whole new level backed by information directly from the source – the market.

This concludes Module 6.

In Module 7, I will discuss Inefficient Markets
